Pope John Paul II: A Saint for Our Times (Documentary, 60 minutes) Karol Josef Wojtyla was born in the crucible of a violent world in the midst of great changes, in a village near Krakow, Poland in 1920. Over the next half century he would go on to become one of the world's most influential leaders -- affecting the lives of people throughout the world. First as Archbishop and Cardinal of Poland and later as Pope John Paul II, he would challenge the powerful on behalf of common people and human rights. He would take on dictators in Asia, Latin America, Europe and the Soviet Union itself, demanding dignity and respect for the rights of the "little people." As Pope, he would also take strong positions on social issues that remain controversial today. Amazingly, people throughout the world responded to his charisma with great curiosity and affection regardless of their religious beliefs. His travels to distant lands and his overture to religious leaders of other faiths to make common cause of world peace endeared him to millions of people.

Nearly every teen in America is on the Internet every day, socializing with friends and strangers alike, "trying on" identities and building a virtual profile of themselves - one that many kids insist is a more honest depiction of who they really are than the person they portray at home or in school. In "Growing Up Online," FRONTLINE peers inside the world of this cyber-savvy generation through the eyes of teens and their parents, who often find themselves on opposite sides of a new digital divide. A generation with a radically different notion of privacy and personal space, today's adolescents are grappling with issues their parents never had to deal with: from cyber bullying to instant "Internet fame" to the specter of online sexual predators. FRONTLINE producer Rachel Dretzin investigates the risks, realities and misconceptions of teenage self-expression on the World Wide Web.
